In this lesson, I want to introduce you and show you OpenOffice. This is the free solution for everything that is similar to Microsoft. If you want a version that is similar to create your marketing and documents, you can use OpenOffice if you don't have Microsoft. To access it, go to www.openoffice.org. It is an important element of the No Cost Income Stream. This is a short lesson on how to download it.

The screenshot shows the Apache OpenOffice 4.1.2 website homepage. At the top, there is a banner with the OpenOffice logo, the text "The Free and Open Productivity Suite", and "100,000,000+ Downloads!". Below the banner, the main heading is "Apache OpenOffice 4.1.2 released". The page is divided into two main columns. The left column contains a list of links for users to learn more, download, get help, do more with, participate in, or stay in touch with OpenOffice. The right column features "Recent Blog Posts" and "Recent News" sections. The "Recent Blog Posts" section lists several articles from October 2013 to December 2014, including announcements for version 4.1.2, community updates, and a review. The "Recent News" section includes a headline about Udine moving to OpenOffice and saving 360,000 Euro, dated 16 September 2014. At the bottom of the page, there is a section for "Apache OpenOffice 4.1.1 released" dated 21 August 2014, with links to release notes and download instructions.
